

HISTORY & NATURE

Named for General Duncan Lamont Clinch, a prominent figure of the Second Seminole War, construction of Fort Clinch began in 1847. It is one of a series of masonry forts constructed between 1816 and 1867 known as the Third System Fortifications. The fort was built at the mouth of the St. Mary's River to protect the natural deep-water port of Fernandina—the eastern link of Florida's only cross-state railroad. Never fully completed, the fort still served as a military post during the Civil War, Spanish-American War and World War II.

Fort Clinch became one of the state's first parks in 1935. The Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) began restoring the buildings at the fort in 1936. In 1937 the CCC began building roads and campgrounds. Today, visitors can tour the fort and see how it may have looked in 1864 as it was being built by Army Engineers.

Within this 2,178-acre park are several natural communities. Maritime hammocks, with large Spanish moss-draped live oaks, thrive here. Coastal grasslands meet the hammocks and stretch along the shore behind dunes on the Atlantic Ocean and Cumberland Sound. Both areas offer great wildlife viewing and are home to gopher tortoises, deer, raccoons, bobcats and numerous species of birds and reptiles.

Willow Pond Trail winds around a series of freshwater ponds that offer prime habitat for alligators and turtles. Egan's Creek Marsh borders the west boundary of the park, providing a saltwater estuary for an abundance of marine life. The salt marsh offers scenic vistas and views of many species of wading birds while the beaches provide a critical foraging and nesting habitat for colonial shorebirds and sea turtles.
